Danielle Beston is a Barrister and Solicitor of the High Court of New Zealand holding a Bachelor of Laws and a Bachelor of Arts, both from the University of Auckland. She is a member of the New Zealand Law Society, The Auckland District Law Society and the Criminal Bar Association. Danielle has been asked to present and teach at seminars held by the Continuing Legal Education Division of the New Zealand Law Society and to address final year law students at the University of Auckland through the alumni network. Danielle was also recently shortlisted for the Lawyer Monthly Women in Law Awards 2017 in the category of Debt Recovery.

Danielle has a special interest in traffic and transportation law and she has been enjoying practising in this area for the past 14 years. She has represented clients in a wide range of different industries throughout New Zealand in relation to Police Prosecutions and New Zealand Transport Agency investigations. She has also been a contributor to the New Zealand Trucking Magazine's "Legal Lines" column since 2006.

Danielle first became involved in transport and traffic law because she recognized that there was a demand for lawyers with expertise in this area and since then she has earned a reputation as the "go-to-girl" for her passion and dedication to her clients causes. Danielle regularly appears in the District Court and the High Court on matters ranging from minor traffic infringements to serious criminal charges. She deliberately only carries a modest case load, ensuring that each client receives the care and attention that they deserve.
